Want a job in the legal profession? If so, write a legal cover letter that showcases your training, experience, expertise, and interest in filling the opening you're responding to. Legal cover letter examples should focus on information that will turn a hiring manager's head in your direction. If you're a legal secretary, tell what you've done to help the attorneys you've worked for. If you're a lawyer, include specific details about the specialty you've been part of, whether personal injury, criminal law, or wills and trusts. Keep in mind that any legal cover letter should end with a polite request for a personal interview so you can meet the hiring manager in person.
